M'JIMSEY'S BOOM HAS A HARD TIME

MISSOURI G. O. P. LEADER CAN'T WIN THE ST. LOUISANS

FACTIONS SPLIT IN CITY

Caulfield and Davis Are Favored There, With Several Others Up as Possibilities

By A. T. EDMONSTON

Jefferson City, Oct. 16.—A pilgrimage the electic editorial emancipator, E. E. E. McJimsey of the Springfield Republican, made two weeks ago to St. Louis, the Missouri mecca of all Republicans seeking nominations on the "gop" state ticket at the primary of next August, 1920, gleaned for his supporters the sad but true information that he would not have the support there of 40,000 pro-German and 25,000 negro party electors if he entered the race for governor. The conference this Springfield editor had with leaders of the powerful "gop" machine of that city, while convincing that he need not look for many votes there next August, developed the cheerful fact that he had not much to fear from the St. Louis primary result since the "gop" machine, judging from conditions existing then, was hopelessly divided on a gubernatorial candidate, one huge faction favoring Attorney H. S. Caulfield for the brilliant record he made while excise commissioner of St. Louis during the Hadley administration, and another wing, also of proportions, declaring openly and above board that Lieutenant Colonel Dwight Davis was their choice, and still smaller elements gromming either Superintendent of Schools Sam A. Baker, or State Auditor George W. Hackmann, or Representative S. F. O'Fallon of Holt county, the speaker of the last house, or State Senator Howard Gray of Jasepr county, for the nomination. The indications then were that the dozen opposing factions would never be united on one candidate, and fight the final nominee, for one reason or another, at the November election to bring about a decisive defeat for that wing.

Friends Won't Give Up Hope.

The friends of Editor McJimsey of Springfield who have increased wonderfully out in the state since it developed that the St. Louis "gop" machine was opposed to him, have not by any means given up hope. The fact that the pro-German and the negro "gop" machine of St. Louis has eliminated him from the race is adding to his strength daily in the regions of the high grass, and now that the worst is known his supporters are working harder than ever to land the gubernatorial nomination at the August primary. The next move, it is stated, will be to issue a statement that Editor McJimsey is hundred per cent American, and, therefore, does not care for the support of electors in St. Louis, Kansas City or anywhere else in Missouri who are not loyal to their country. The object is to capture all full American Republican votes, not alone in rural Missouri, but also that in the two larger cities, amounting to probably 25,000, which, added to a clear sweep of all American Republican primary votes out in the state, totaling, probably, 80,000, would give McJimsey a total at the August primary of 105,000 votes, which are considered sufficient to capture the "gop" gubernatorial nomination.

St. Louis Votes Will Cost Dearly.

It is further pointed out by the supporters of Editor McJimsey that the St. Louis votes of either Caulfield or Davis, or both, if the two are persuaded to enter the race for the Republican nomination for governor in opposition to each other, will have to come, chiefly from pro-German and negro "gop" electors. This condition, regardless of the fact that both these gubernatorial possibilities are native born and fully a hundred per cent American, with not the slightest question of their patriotism and loyalty existing, will cost dearly out in the state, and thereby put either, or both, out of the running long before primary day.

Election statistics easily prove how necessary it is for any Republican aspiring to a place on the "gop" ticket to run well out in the tall timbers to win. The present strength of the Republican party in Missouri, including all Americans, native born and naturalized pro-Germans, and 60,000 negroes from Missouri and elsewhere and excepting women electors, is plac-

CHALK TALK TO M. H. S. TEAM; ALL SET FOR ALBANY GAME

Visitors Here Tomorrow Have Lost to Pattonsburg; Line-up for the Locals Unchosen

The final plans are in the making today by the Maryville High School football team for the game here with the Albany High School team on the State Teachers College grounds at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Good practice has been indulged in, and yesterday afternoon the members of the team were treated to a chalk talk by Coach Ziegler, in which some of the more difficult plays were explained.

The local players are in fine shape for the game tomorrow, showing a great improvement since last Friday's game here with King City. They will enter the contest with the full expectation of carrying off their third straight victory of the season.

Little is known here concerning the Albany team. Two weeks ago Pattonsburg took Albany to a 21-to-0 trimming on the Albany grounds.

The team for the game tomorrow will be chosen from the following squad; French, Barry, Carstens, Allen, Moore, Campbell, Miller, Boatman, Kirby, McPherron, King, Williams, Clark, Gray, Masters and Hull. No regulars have been definitely chosen, and it is probable that Coach Ziegler will give the whole squad a chance if the victory is assured early in the game.

SUIT ON CONTRACT IS IN COURT TODAY

E. A. TAYLOR AND OTHERS SUING SAMUEL B. HARMAN

CASE OF A RENTED FARM

Replevin Suit of Frank Grandel vs. W. V. and C. Cooper a Victory for the Plaintiff

Beginning yesterday afternoon and extending through today, the contract suit of Edward Ayres Taylor and others vs. Samuel B. Harman occupied the attention of the Nodaway circuit court and was just ready to go to the jury at press time this afternoon. No other business has been transacted.

In the Taylor-Harman contract, the plaintiff is suing to recover the full amount for which he rented a farm near Graham. When the farm was sold, with certain permanent improvements that the defendant had made, the defendant understood that he was to be reimbursed for the improvements on condition that he allow them to go with the land. When he tried to hold out part of the rent money to cover this, the plaintiff sued for the full amount.

A. F. Harvey represents the plaintiff, while Wright & Ford are counsel for the defendant.

The jury trying the case was composed of W. R. Hughes, Mike Sherlock, Ed Egley, Henry Wright, E. H. Bainum, Fred Wray, J. L. Partridge, D. E. Hotchkin, Frank Reavis, Ed McMillan, J. A. Ford and Ed Hamlin.

After about an hour's deliberation yesterday afternoon the jury in the replevin suit of Frank Grundel vs. W. V. Cooper and C. Cooper returned the following verdict: "We, the jury, find that at the institution of this suit the plaintiff was entitled to the possession of 19 yearling steers and heifers averaging in weight about 500 pounds each and one pair of pipe tongs, and that defendants wrongfully detained the possession thereof from the plaintiff."

DR. DANIEL G. SMITH, ARKOE BURIED THERE THIS MORNING

Died in St. Joseph Night Before Last; He Was 72 Years Old and Had Had Poor Health

Funeral services for Dr. Daniel G. Smith of Arkoe, whose death occurred Tuesday night at 6:30 o'clock in a hospital in St. Joseph, were held this morning at 10 o'clock at the Christian church in Arkoe. The services were conducted by the Rev. W. H. Rust of Burlington Junction. Burial was in Swinford cemetery, east of Arkoe.

Doctor Smith, who was 72 years old, had been in poor health for two years, being taken to the St. Joseph hospital less than two weeks ago.

Surviving are five children, three daughters, Miss Lois Smith, at home, Mrs. Frank Andrews of Dufur, Ore., and Mrs. Dwight Swinford of Arkoe, and two sons, Charles Smith, at home, and Fred Smith of Argo, N. Dak.

Mrs. Harry Todd of this city sang a solo at the services.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" Is Here.

A street parade up-town this noon called the attention of Maryville citizens to the fact that the Terry Uncis Tom's Cabin show had arrived in town. Music, banners and bloodhounds—the very same that trail the fleeing Eliza across the ice—were in the parade, and considerable attention was attracted. The tent for the show is pitched on the Kelly lot on East Third street. A single performance will be given tonight.

Music at the M. H. S. Assembly.

The weekly assembly at the Maryville high school this afternoon had a vocal solo by Sterrill Bishop, a violin solo by Margaret Dietz, a reading by Evelyn Raines, a piano solo by Catherine Remus and an explanation of the girls' basket ball plans by Ruth Bookman.

Will Remove a Patient.

Mart Young was in Maryville last Saturday and expects the last of the week to remove Aunt Priscilla Strawn from the St. Francis hospital to a private hospital conducted by the Fullers, who recently left the Donlin farm, east of Hopkins. The doctors fear Aunt Priscilla will never fully recover from the injuries she sustained when some boys ran into her, knocking her down, during the Hopkins barbecue. Her age is against her, still she seems cheerful, does not suffer a great deal and always asks about her old friends and neighbors at home.—Good Hope Items in the Hopkins Journal.

Good Alfalfa Yields Reported.

J. R. King & Son write as follows to the Hopkins Journal: We thought that you might want to know how our alfalfa is yielding this year. We have just sold Glen Gordon the fourth cutting at $10 an acre, which would pay the rent on rented ground. We cut it three times before and got at least 3½ tons per acre in spite of the fact that the army worms got the most of the crop and the dry weather hurt it a great deal. At the present price of $30 it pays to raise it. We will have 20 acres next year, and one year got six tons per acre. Charles Donlin is doing enqually well with his, or better. He can tell you how much he has got off his ground this year. An ordinary year means fully $100 an acre return from the ground. Can you beat it?

R. O. Yeaman left today for his home in Ponca City, Okla., after a ten days' visit in Maryville and Graham. Mr. Yeaman was recently discharged from the army after two years of service overseas with the First division.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL PLAYERS LEAVE FOR KIRKSVILLE GAME

The football team of the State Teachers College had a royal send-off at the Wabash station this morning, when fifteen players and Coach Robert Rice left for Kirksville, where the team will meet the team of the Kirksville State Teachers College tomorrow afternoon. School was dismissed for a time, and the students went in a body to the station, where a chorus of yells was given as the train pulled out.

The route to Kirksville is through Moberly and is a long trip, which necessitated the early start. The team will return to Maryville Saturday.

Maryville has lost two games this season, one to Tarkio and one to Palmer College of Albany. Kirksville tied Tarkio 6 to 6 at Tarkio last week.

FROM THE PREHISTORIC AGE

Carl Hagenbeck's Statuary of Monsters of the Past Is One of the Sights of Hamburg.

Undoubtedly the oldest collection of statuary in the world is that of life-sized cement images of the dinosaurs, which Carl Hagenbeck, the famous collector of wild animals, who supplies most of the zoos and circuses in the world, has made upon his estate at Hamburg.

As you probably know, the dinosaurs were a strange race of animals who inhabited the earth millions of years ago, before man and the other mammals appeared. Some of them were much larger than elephants. Some were harmless, grazing, creatures, but others were terribly carnivorous.

The appearance of the dinosaurs is known from fossil remains which have been found, and Mr. Hagenbeck has had accurate likenesses made and placed in lifelike postures in a park about the edges of a little lake. If a man who knew nothing about it were to come suddenly upon this place on a moonlight night, he would probably know just how some people who do not live in dry countries occasionally feel.

Pink elephants and purple kangaroos would be nothing to the image of diplodocus, the largest creature that ever walked the earth. Mr. Hagenbeck's cement likeness of this animal is 66 feet long, and is seen quietly grazing in a little glade. Nearby a triceratops, with three horns on its head and weighing a couple of tons, is just emerging from the water, while a tyrannosaurus—a carnivorous brute bigger than a buffalo—is represented in the act of devouring its prey. There are 30 of the monsters and more are to be made.

YANKS WOULD NOT BE DENIED

Boys Made Good Against Heavy Odds in the Largest Battle in American History.

The Argonne-Meuse battle fought by our First army was the largest battle in American history, says Arthur W. Page in World's Work. General Pershing's forces engaged were about ten times as large as those of General Lee at Gettysburg. It was a vital element in the conquest of the German forces and our main contribution to the war's decision. The first great battle of the new British armies—the Somme—occurred 23 months after Great Britain entered the war. Our army went into its first great struggle 18 months after our declaration. Half of the troops and divisional staffs were green, and our corps and army staffs had had but the very scanty battle experience acquired in the Marne-Vesle campaign under the French and our own operation at St. Mihiel. The place to be attacked was extremely difficult, and Gen. von der Marwitz and his troops were seasoned and formidable opponents. Under the circumstances it was just as reasonable to look for a terrible catastrophe such as befell the British at Gallipoli, the French in the Champagne in 1917, or the Germans in the Champagne in July, 1918, as to look for a decisive victory—perhaps more so.

The state of our army would naturally have suggested spending five or six months more in preparation for such a task. The state of the war incontinently demanded that we tackle the problem immediately in whatever shape we were to handle it.

CENSUS BUREAU WILL TAKE WHOLE BUILDING FOR WORK

Dispossesses Aircraft Production Department at Washington; Much Machinery Is Needed

Washington, Oct. 16.—The advance guard of the census bureau in Washington has swooped down upon the quarters of the aircraft production section of the war department and dispossessed that branch of the army of about half the temporary building it occupied during the war. It is the intention of the aircraft section to surrender the entire building to the census bureau within a few months.

The building, a full city block square in its dimensions, offers commodious quarters for the rapidly expanding clerical force of the fourteenth decennial census. It likewise offers excellent facilities for the installation and operation of the many ingenious machines to be used by the bureau of the census in tabulating the statistics which will be gathered by the census enumerators during the month of January, 1920.

More than 8,000 packing boxes have already been provided for sending out copies of the census schedules and other supplies to the 85,000 enumerators in the field. The first shipment of schedules is already in progress and the boxes now being sent out will be returned to the census bureau as rapidly as possible, thus keeping them in constant use.

Finally the supervisors and enumerators after the enumeration is completed will use these same boxes to return to the census bureau the schedules filled out with the items of information which they have recorded on the schedules in their canvass of the population, homes and farms of the United States.

The dimensions of these boxes being approximately 26x20x11 inches, a simple and obvious computation shows that each box will come back to Washington packed with more than three cubic feet of statistical data.

Many punching, sorting and tabulating machines are already set up in the new quarters of the bureau. Most of these machines are products of the mechanical laboratory of the census bureau and have been invented and manufactured solely for the purpose of performing the intricate and rapid work required in sorting and tabulating the millions of punched cards upon which the facts and figures of the entire nation will be transcribed from the information gathered by the field force.

CHEER UP, BRIDGET! BEHOLD THE JAPANESE HIRED GIRL

Rises First, Goes to Bed Last, Sleeps on the Floor in the Hall, and Draws $2.50 a Month

American girls working in factories or homes who complain of long hours and low wages need only look across the water to their Japanese sisters to feel glad they live in the United States. In Japan the gejo, or domestic servant, earns between $1 and $2.50 a month besides her living, which means what the family leaves on the table.

Her duties are to do the cooking, washing, housecleaning and serving from five to six in the morning until ten or eleven at night. She rises before anyone else in the house and because there is no place for her to sleep until the others have retired, she goes to bed last. That is, she sleeps on a quilt on the floor of the entrance hall.

The drudgery and monotony of her life leave her neither opportunity nor desire for mental improvement. Her working hours are spent mostly in the smoky, dingy kitchen, and whatever minutes she can call her own are spent in rest or carousing.

The factory girl of Japan has slightly better conditions. Her wages are much higher, averaging $4.67 a month, and her hours at the facory are only twelve a day. Nevertheless, her work is hard and monotonous and, like the gejo, she has no time to study or take thought of religious matters

Through the nation-wide campaign which the Episcopal church is conducting it hopes to reach these thousands of girls in Japan who so greatly need Christian teaching and who are so inaccessible to ordinary mission schools. Episcopal mission work already in that country will be expanded and more teachers will be sent to reach the young girls of the poor classes.

Barnard M. E. Church.

Revival meetings at the Barnard M. E. church are increasing in interests. Last Sunday was a great day, the house was filled to its utmost capacity. There were three more accessions to the church. Dr. Cameron Harmon will arrive some time this week. Service commences each night at 8:30. Come and hear the old songs that mother use to sing. You are invited. There will be special music. Arthur S. Olsen, Pastor.

Her First Corset

The young girl's first corset is a matter of considerable importance that mothers are beginning to realize.

There has been an all too prevalent opinion that any kind of a corset was good enough for the first one, but little girls will grow into big girls, and while they are do-so their figures are greatly influenced by th ecorset they are wearing.

The foundation of her future begins with her first corset.

The growing figure has a natural tendency to mold itself to the lines of the corset. The corset, therefore, is responsible for a beautiful figure or a bad one.

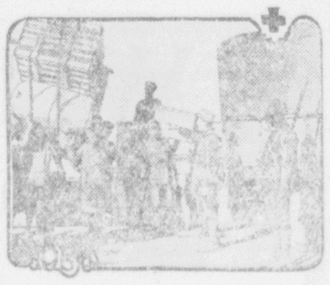
Will You Be One Of A Million Workers To Secure Members for The American Red Cross

Volunteer Now At Your Chapter Headquarters Third Red Cross Roll Call November 2-11

AROUND THE WORLD WITH THE AMERICAN RED CROSS.

At Saloniki.



The veritable mountains of relief supplies turned out by the millions of chapter workers during the war made the American Red Cross one of the biggest "manufacturing concerns" in the world, with great warehouse space at scores of strategic points all around the globe.

—THAT ENDS WELL

By EDNA FOREST.

Mollie had been playing a game, a very interesting and secret game, and she had never been so happy in all her life. The game was "Hide and Seek," of an entirely new, and romantic nature, and Mollie returned from her last exploit in high, but subdued spirits.

Eleanor, the married sister, whom she visited, must not suspect the delightful pastime of her summer afternoons. Eleanor, strictly conventional, would be horror stricken. The secret game had begun by chance, and on Mollie's side was the advantage.

When she had arisen early one inviting morning slipping silently down past closed rooms to a dewy garden beneath, she had intended to take but a brief dip in the sea, and when Mollie, disporting herself among the waves, looked down the isolated beach, she fancied herself monarch—or perhaps monarch "ess," of all she surveyed.

As she sat upon a great stone in the early sunshine, she saw, however, that another as ambitious as she, was swimming about in the blue.

Mollie in embarrassment, darted again into the water, going further out than she had heretofore ventured, and being roughly brought to her senses by the swimmer himself.

"It is dangerous for you to be out here alone," he said. "I am returning to the hotel. You'd better come back."

Mollie suddenly weakened, requested breathlessly, his help.

When the two reached the shore, she resting in the warm sands, thanked him, beginning in her pretty way, a sort of "fielding" conversation.

The man at least was held by it, for he made no motion to carry out his intention of returning to the hotel. And this was Mollie's advantage from the beginning. She recognized at once in her rescuer, a certain noted curate from the city, whose arrival at the resort had been heralded a few days before. This was, indeed, was an attendant at his city church.

But the curate himself was left unenlightened as to Mollie's knowledge of his identity, and ignorant of her own. It was as they were pleasantly chatting that she waved her hand in quick farewell, and literally disappeared.

Mr. Sutherland, Eleanor innocently regretted, was returning to the city at the end of the fortnight and she feared she would have no opportunity of entertaining him at the cottage.

Mollie, in her secret planning, decided to completely disappear from Mr. Sutherland's life before the end of his fortnight, leaving to him ever after but a romantic, and, she hoped, a pleasing memory.

So, she was seated demurely reading in the rector's favorite book as he came down into the glen. Her dress was blue cotton, her white collar and cuffs neat and plain.

Her wide eyes expressed surprise at the rector's appearance. His keen eyes expressed pleasure. When Mollie would have politely departed, he begged her to remain.

The sun proclaimed the noon luncheon hour, when she finally took from Mr. Sutherland, the volume of poems which he had been reading aloud.

"Good-bye," laughed Mollie, and was instantly lost to view among the trees.

Though the rector arose in quest of her, Mollie was gone. Which branching path she had chosen he did not know. But he went back to his seat beneath the oak—to sit again and dream of her. Then at last, Eleanor brought Mollie's fascinating game to an unexpected end.

"Mr. Sutherland, the rector is coming to dinner at five tonight," she said. "I cannot be back from our motor trip until six. Be here to welcome him, Mollie, and, do make a pleasing impression, dear. Mr. Sutherland's opinion is worth while."

Mollie sighed. So she was to have no memory romance after all, and to the man she would be but a commonplace girl, in a commonplace, modern home.

Freda was admitting the tall figure of the rector as she reached the foot of the stairs. It was impossible for Mollie to retreat. In desperation she slipped into a hall closet beneath the stairs.

Mollie knew after a suffocating lapse in the closet that he had made himself comfortable for a long wait. Hopefully Mollie fumbled along the wall, finding there evidently a maid's enveloping apron. Frantically she stuffed her hair into the starched cap's crown, her feet, sandals and all, went into the shoes, then Mollie opened the closet door.

The rector stared and Mollie stared at a reflection of herself in the mirror. Freda's borrowed apron was far from clean. Mollie's hair was escaping from Freda's cap. Speechlessly, she fled up the stair.

It was Freda who knocked presently at Mollie's door.

"That man," she said, disgustedly, "says he must speak to 'other maid.' He don't believe me that I'm the only maid. You go tell him."

With the laughter light of 'hide and seek' still in her eyes, Mollie came, very prettily dressed down the stair.

Eleanor returning later, was astonished to hear her rector happily proclaiming:

"I'm going to see that you stay found, now that I have you at last, Mollie dear."

ADVANTAGE ALL WITH DAVID

Modern Military Men Have Figured That Goliath Never Had a Chance to Win.

Popular sympathy has always been on the side of David in his little bickering with the Giant Goliath. It ought to be quite the other way, because there never was a minute when Goliath had a chance against an agile antagonist who could choose his own position and distance, and who was equipped with a long-range weapon.

This is a problem which has been thoroughly worked out by modern military men and naval tacticians. A fight of the kind can have only one result.

We are accustomed to think of the sling as an old-world weapon, but there is no question of the fact that it was in common use among the natives of Mexico, Central America and Peru long before Goliath and David were born.

Dr. Philip A. Means has been looking up the subject for the Smithsonian institution, and he says that the early Spanish conquerors in America found the sling a formidable weapon in the hands of the aborigines.

A Spanish historian, Del Castillo, describing a battle with Mexican natives, writes: "As we approached with our army they shot from above so many stones that they covered the ground. They had slings and plenty of stones, and they shot arrows and stones so fast that they wounded five of our foot soldiers and two horsemen."

In Peru have been dug up many ancient vessels that bear paintings illustrative of combats in which slings were used.

Xeres, another Spanish historian, describing the capture of a Peruvian city, says of the native troops: "In the van of their army came the slingmen, who hurled pebbles from slings. These slingmen carry shields made from narrow boards, very small. They also wear armor jackets made of quilted cotton."

Many of the actual slings used by early and even prehistoric Americans have been obtained from graves or otherwise recovered. They are made of various materials, including human hair, wool, llama hair and vegetable fiber.

Men Say Women Are Curious.

Men say women are "curious"—that to get a woman's curiosity aroused is a sure way to start something. Yet, says a bulletin that has been issued by the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, thousands of men sent money recently to a Texas man who advertised some literature "for men only." Men wrote from everywhere. They fairly swamped the advertiser with mail.

And what did they get? They got stung, just as they so richly deserved. They got a bunch of pictures of men riding wild western horses—innocent pictures, such as a man, woman or child would enjoy.

It might seem poetic justice to allow a man who would answer such an advertiser to continue to get the stinger, but the post office department, as soon as the matter came to its attention, issued an order against such an use of the mails.

Wild Race Is Promised.

The Nomad learns that one of the features of the coming out of the New England Amateur association, to be held at Salem Willows, will be a toad race. F. H. Sidney's two homing toads will be carried from Wakefield to the Willows by auto and liberated there. The two toads are "Teddy," the homing toad that hopped from Charlestown to Wakefield in a single night, and "Pete," who has just returned from France, where he spent 21 months as a mascot of the Fourteenth engineers. Someone will be on hand to time the winner when he reaches the Sidney home at Valley View, Wakefield, on top of the hill in Wakefield park.—Boston Transcript.

The Reform of a Poet.

Harry Kemp, "tramp poet," who left Kansas university ten years ago to figure in many escapades in the East and finally to become a successful poet and playright in New York, has advertised in a Lawrence paper a request asking his creditors of earlier days to get together their old bills that they may take them to a dinner he will give there shortly. After the dinner he promises to pay all his old debts. As the old hymn has it: "While the lights hold out to burn, sinful poets may return."—Detroit Free Press.

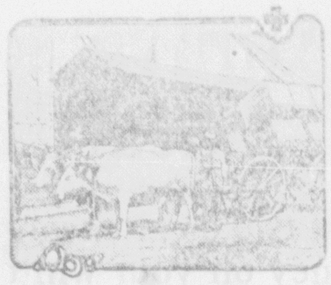
His Occupation.

"They put the returned soldier at the clockmaker's to putting figures on the dials."

"Then he must have felt at home marking time."

AROUND THE WORLD WITH THE AMERICAN RED CROSS.

In Roumania.



Soon after the entrance of the United States in the war the successes of the Central Powers in Roumania had reduced that country to a most tragic condition and in the summer of 1917, the American Red Cross despatched its first Roumanian relief contingent. Two hospitals were at once taken over and operated by the Red Cross, a canteen for the starving refugees established and food and clothing distributed over a large area.

Transportation was one of the toughest problems with which the Red Cross workers in Roumania had to deal. Here is seen an oxcart used by the Red Cross to carry its relief supplies up into the mountains.

Who's the Profiteer?

"Not I," says the packer. "Not I," says the manufacturer. "Not I," says the middleman. "Not I," says the retailer. "Surely not I," says the consumer with the flat pocketbook. "And positively not the farmer!" thunders

The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

True enough, the farmer has profited by war prices. But to what extent? Well, he has been able to paint his house so it looks as well as the grocer's in town.

He has been able to buy an automobile as good as the plumber's. His family has been able to wear clothes as good as the other church folks.

In other words, the farmer for the first time has had a fair living wage for his labor, with a little return on the capital he has invested in his farm and its equipment.

The farmer is not a profiteer, said THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN will fight to prove his right to a fair profit for his labor and his products.

Fraser-Brewer Nuptials.

Notable among the nuptial events of October was the marriage of Miss Allie Jean Fraser and James Blaine Brewer of Okmulgee, Okla., which took place this morning at half past nine o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Fraser, 325 East Third street. Dr. Gilbert S. Cox, pastor of the First Methodist church, performed the single ring ceremony in the presence of the relatives and intimate friends of the couple. Preceding the ceremony Miss Jennie Garrett sang "I Love You Truly" (Bond), and the bridal couple entered to the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengrin," played by Miss Marie Reuillard. The bride wore an attractive traveling costume, fashioned of blue silvertone, with hat to match. Her flowers were a corsage of bride's roses and swanconia. Following the ceremony refreshments in which a yellow and white color scheme prevailed, were served. The dining table held as a centerpiece a cut glass rose bowl filled with Aaron Ward roses. Mr. Brewer and his bride left for a short wedding trip and after November 1 will be at home in Okmulgee. Among the out of town guests who were here for the wedding were the bride's brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fraser, and their sons, Paul Gordon, Jr., and Elmer James of Kansas City, her uncle, Dr. W. E. Ham of Beattie, Kan., Mrs. Art Schmohl of St. Joseph and John Owen Murrin of St. Louis. The wedding is the culmination of a romance begun in Okmulgee, where the bride taught in the public schools for three years. She is exceedingly popular in the younger social set, as was attested by the many functions in her honor preceding the nuptials.

ed at 325,000. At the August primary of 1916 the four Republican candidates for governor polled a total of 192,000 votes. The St. Louis vote only aggregated 45,000, or 22.4 per cent of what was cast in the state, leaving 76.6 per cent to represent the primary strength of the Republican party beyond the borders of that big negro and pro-German stronghold, an element which now intends, through hook or crook, to name the next "gop" state ticket and thereby eliminate any candidate who is "dry" or too friendly to the present League of Nations covenant.

Pro-Germans Against League.

The League of Nations covenant is the Gibraltar the pro-German portion of the Missouri Republican party is attacking and constitutes the issue on which it will be defeated at the November election of 1920. The "gop" state committee is hopelessly and helplessly divided on this paramount principle with the wing which represents the sections of Missouri in which the negroes and the pro-German elements predominate, arrayed against it, and those who hail from the places in which one hundred per cent Americans pervail, holding an opinion that the issue is wholly non-partisan and therefore ought to be dealt with accordingly.

The leaders of the pro-German half of the "gop" party in St. Louis and Kansas City and the few Missouri counties in which that element is strong, have grown so bitter and fierce in their denunciations of the League of Nations that the announcement has already been made that they will not stand for the renomination on their ticket of United States Senator Seldon P. Spencer, the Republican they sent to congress in 1918 with the aid of 60,000 negro votes. The chief objections of the opposition are: first that he is a loyal enthusiastic Republican who favors the League of Nations, but, with six or eight reservations and mild amendments, and, second, that he is too "dry" to suit the Republican voters of St. Louis, Kansas City and other "wet" places of the state. An ultimatum has also been issued by these pro-German state "gop" committeemen that any gubernatorial candidate or any other Republican seeking less responsible honors on the 1920 "gop" ticket need not apply for their support unless a positive public declaration in opposition to the League of Nations is first promulgated.

WOMEN WORKERS.

In almost every line of war activities the women of this country have done well and have taken front rank for doing work that released thousands of men for service overseas. Some women have been over-ambitious and, at the expense of their health, have filled places once occupied by men. Every woman who, because of overwork, has brought on some ailment peculiar to her sex, should depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore her health and strength, as this remedy is now recognized as the standard and has restored multitudes.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Neuens left this morning for their home in Sheridan, Wyo., after a visit with the former's mother, Mrs. Anna Neuens.

Profit Sharing OR The Worker's Fair Share

By GEORGE W. PERKINS.

New York.—(Special)—Speaking at the annual meeting of the National Civic Fedcration on "Profit Sharing, or the Worker's Fair Share," George W. Perkins said, in part:

"The Worker's Fair Share" has been a real problem ever since the world began. It has changed greatly as civilization has progressed, and has crowded harder and harder for solution as intelligence and education have spread and broadened.

The worker's fair share was an unsolved problem when the expression that designated the relationship between the man of capital and the man of labor was "owner and slave." It still existed when the expression of relationship became "master and man." It still exists in these days, when the expression of relationship is "employer and employee." These very changes in the expressions used to designate the relationship between capital and labor show that steady progress has been made toward solving the problem of the worker's fair share.

I take it that everyone believes that we cannot go back to the old conditions; that we must move forward to an even better relationship than that expressed by the term "employer and employee." You ask: "What is this newer relationship to be and what term will express it?" I answer that I believe it must be "partners." If I am right, then the next question is how can this relationship be worked out so as to bring the best results to all concerned?

Twenty-five years ago I became convinced that only through profit sharing that was real, honest and open could we hope to find anything like a satisfactory and permanent method of arriving at the worker's fair share.

Profit Sharing Not Philanthropy.

I do not look upon profit sharing as philanthropy or a form of benevolence. I do not put it in the same class with gifts at Christmas-time or bonuses at the end of the year. I do not approve or believe in any plan that even savors of giving a man something for nothing.

The profit sharing I believe in is the kind that is real; the kind that promotes thorough and efficient co-operation between employer and employee; the kind that makes partners of employees; the sort of profit sharing that is practiced between partners in a business. Anything short of this is bound to result in failure and will widen rather than narrow the breach between employer and employee.

Close observation, coupled with considerable experience, has convinced me that practically all the many failures in profit sharing, both in this country and in Europe, have occurred because at bottom the plans were not honestly devised nor equitably worked out.

In the past the man who was not educated or trained to think independently struck because he wanted $2 a day if he was only getting $1.75, and for quite a period labor differences were settled on this basis. I believe that we are rapidly passing out of that period, for our laboring people are so well educated and so able to think independently that, in many cases, they are no longer striking for a definite increase in wages, but for what they regard as a fairer proportion of the profits of the business in which they are engaged.

If I am right about this, then we are rapidly leaving behind the period when labor disputes could be settled by a mere increase in wages and are entering the period when profit sharing in some form must be practiced.

Outline of a Correct Profit-Sharing Plan.

A good many years of actual experience have made me very optimistic regarding profit-sharing plans worked out along the following lines:

First—Every business has, first of all, to earn operating expenses, depreciation and fair returns on honest capitalization.

Second—I believe that every business should consider that the compensation paid employees is for the purpose of earning a sum of money sufficient to pay the above-mentioned items.

Third—I believe that any profits over and above such sum should, on some percentage basis, be divided between the capital used in the business and the employees engaged in the business.

Fourth—I believe that in neither case should these profits be immediately withdrawn from the business; that they should be left in the business for a reasonable length of time to protect and increase its financial strength and safety; that in the case of capital its share of these profits should be carried to surplus; that in the case of employees their share of these profits should be distributed to them in some form of security representing an interest in the business, and that each employee should be required to hold such security for a reasonable length of time, say three to five years.

Fifth—I believe that the employees' share of these profits should be allotted to them as nearly as possible on the basis of the compensation they receive. Up to date this has proved to be the best method.

Results Attained by a Proper Plan.

Now, let us see what such a plan means: In the first place, it means that under such an arrangement each employee becomes a working partner in the business. He is on the same footing as the financial partners. For if the concern is a partnership with, say, four or five members, the partners themselves are drawing out each year what, in a way, might be called salaries, viz., approximately the amount of money necessary to meet their general living expenses, leaving their surplus profits in the business. Any partnership or any profit-sharing plan that divided up the profits and withdrew them in cash at the end of every year could not last very long.

Why Some Profit-Sharing Plans Fail

Many profit-sharing plans have divided profits with employees on a cash basis and turned the money over to the employees every so often, usually once a year. The result has been that if a man earning $1,000 a year received $200 at the end of the year from a profit-sharing plan, he promptly lifted his living expenses from a $1,000 basis to a $1,200 basis, and began to look upon his income as $1,200 rather than $1,000, and the extra $200 did little to increase his activity and efficiency, or to promote his intellectual efforts in the business concerned.

Then if a period came when business was dull or poor and he did not get the extra $200, he found fault with the owners of the business and became grouchy and inclined to lose interest in his work.

Little real substantial benefit comes from a profit-sharing plan where the profits are paid out in cash, except perhaps where a man uses the money toward buying a home.

Full Publicity Needed About the Business.

In establishing profit-sharing it is of the utmost importance that the entire organization, the wage and salary earners, know in advance exactly what they are expected to accomplish. I mean by this that, on entering a new year, they should know exactly what the preceding year's accomplishments have been. The annual statement of the concern should be full and explicit, so that every man engaged in the enterprise will know what business was done in the preceding year and on what basis profits were and are to be distributed.

Some Objections to the Plan Answered.

Many people have said to me: "Oh, but it takes a long while for a man who is only saving a small sum each year to acquire much of a financial interest in the concern by which he is employed." I have always found that such criticism comes from someone who has not given sufficent thought to the subject, for a small interest means as much to the man having a comparatively small salary as a large interest does to the man of large affairs.

Let us summarize some of the advantages of this method of profit sharing:

First—It is real, it is genuine. The organization as a whole, and each individual in it, has a definite goal for the year's work. They know at the beginning of a year how much money must be earned to cover what we will and fixed charges; they know that they are being pair salaries to earn those fixed charges; they know that they share in all the profits over and above those fixed charges, and they know the basis on which they share, and that the amount of such profits largely depends on the individual and collective effort of each individual in the organization. This in itself is of great practical value to the business from a dollar-and-cent standpoint.

Second—Having reached the goal set, the money over and above the salaries they are paid—in other words, their profits—are invested in the business in which they are engaged and on which their whole time and thought and energy should be centered.

Profit sharing on the basis I favor is sometimes objected to by men or concerns who do not wish to let even their own employees know how little or how much money they are making each year. If they are not making enough money and the business is running on a close margin each year, then by all means they should set their situation before their men, adopt such a profit-sharing plan as I have outlined, and get the genuine co-operation of every man towards increasing the profits and putting the business in a prosperous condition.

The man who is running on a small margin and making little profit may object to making his business affairs public property, on the ground that he would be putting a weapon in the hands of his competitors. Such a man's best protection against his competitors is a loyal, closely knit organization of the highest efficiency, and this important advantage he can only secure through a bona fide profit-sharing plan.

As for the man who is making so much money that he is afraid to let even his own employees know how much he is making, to that man I say that he is a man who, more than any other, is responsible for the serious differences today existing between capital and labor, for with the growing intelligence of the masses, how can he expect such a situation to continue?

As for the man who is making large profits but who objects to profit sharing on the ground that he wants to put those profits away against the day when business may be poor, to such a man, I say that he had better use some of those profits to more deeply interest his men in his business, and do this to such an extent that if the dark days come he can be pretty certain that his men will stand by the business in a way that capital alone never can.

Profit sharing on the basis I favor is also sometimes objected to by concerns whose securities are closely held. There are many ways to obviate this difficulty. Some concerns can increase their capital. Others that cannot, or that cannot do so for a time, can obviate the difficulty by issuing certificates of participation that will draw the same percentage of profit as the regular securities of the business. In other words, where there is a genuine desire to share profits a way can always be found.

TO KEEP CLEAR OF "WAR CHESTS"

RED CROSS RULES THAT DRIVE IS EXCLUSIVELY FOR MEMBERSHIPS.

CHAPTERS RECEIVE NOTICE

Objection Is Made to the Use of Red Cross Name In Such Connection, Is Announcement.

The Red Cross will not become a party to local or community "war chests," according to an announcement issued recently by Alfred Fairbank Manager of the Southwestern Division of the Red Cross. The decision follows a recent ruling of the Central Committee of the American Red Cross and is based upon the fact that the forthcoming Red Cross drive, November 2 to 11, is to be a campaign for individual, not wholesale, memberships.

Chapter chairmen of the Red Cross Chapters throughout Missouri, Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas have been sent the following notification by Manager Fairbank:

"The Central Committee of the American Red Cross has announced that Red Cross Chapters should not become parties to any local war chests or community war chests inasmuch as its Third Roll Call is primarily a call for Red Cross membership.

"As the Red Cross does not plan a wide general campaign for funds this year, the objection to the use of the Red Cross name in connection with such movements is more strongly emphasized than ever. Not only the success of the coming campaign but the future of the Red Cross will be largely dependent upon a full individual membership enrollment.

"Through a direct membership campaign it is possible for the Red Cross to gain the loyal and enthusiastic support of thousands of individuals to whom it must look for its future service. Only insofar as each member feels that the achievements of the Red Cross are made possible through this individual support will it be possible to carry on as comprehensive and far-reaching a program as that upon which the organization now is entering. The acquisition of every loyal member of the Red Cross forms a bulwark of strength far surpassing any possible good that could be gained through general money donations.

"It would, therefore, be detrimental to the spirit and policy of the Red Cross to seek wholesale memberships through war or community chests. The use of the Red Cross name in connection with such movements would tend only to confusion of the public mind and would lessen greatly the force of the individual call to membership."

FIGHTING MEN RESPONDING

SERVICE MEN AID RED CROSS NOVEMBER CAMPAIGN.

Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Are Answering the Call for Volunteer Workers.

Soldiers, sailors and marines, many of whom saw active service overseas, are responding in appreciable numbers to the call of the Red Cross for volunteer workers in the Third Red Cross Roll Call, November 2 to 11.

These service men, who felt the kindly care of the Red Cross from the day they answered the call to arms, are eager to express their gratitude to "the Greatest Mother" by becoming members of the American Red Cross.

The Red Cross fed them when they were hungry, made them laugh when they were tired and worn out, cared for their wounds and their diseases, and helped them readjust themselves to civilian life. Is it any wonder they want to show the American people that they have faith in the Red Cross, that they want to see it perpetuated to carry on through its peace progam the business of helping America to be healthier and happier?

The boys are backing the Red Cross in its Third Roll Call because they have seen it at work and recognize in it an organization for all Americans.

HERO THANKS RED CROSS

Cardinal Mercier Conveys Gratitude of Belgian People for Part Played by Americans.

According to telegraphic advices received by Alfred Fairbank, Manager of the Southwestern Division of the Red Cross at St. Louis, Cardinal Mercier, distinguished Belgian prelate, expressed the gratitude of that nation toward the American Red Cross for the part the organization played in alleviating the suffering of the Belgian people during the war, in a recent informal visit to Red Cross headquarters at Washington.

"I express to you my deep gratitude," Cardinal Mercier said. "I express it to you personally and also in the name of my people, not only to you here, but also to those who are far away. I thank you also for the great work of the Red Cross. I know your membership has grown from 400,000 to, I think it is, 19,000,000 or 20,000,000. This is a splendid progress in a splendid movement."

A SHOCK TO THE COUNTRY

Senator Hitchcock So Characterizes Senator Knox's Attack on Peace Treaty.

AN 'INSANE FOREIGN POLICY'

Amendment or Defeat of the Treaty Would Be Commercial and Financial Disaster for America, Says Nebraska Senator.

Washington, (Special).—Declaring that any amendment to the Treaty of Peace, good or bad, reasonable or unreasonable, means the defeat of the treaty with all its disastrous consequences, Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, made a powerful speech in the Senate today urging that the treaty be ratified without delay and without amendment.

Referring to the recent speech of Senator McCumber, Republican of North Dakota, who voted against the Shantung amendment in the foreign relations committee, Senator Hitchcock said: "He has shown that the proposed amendment instead of helping China deprives her of the benefit of the promises and concessions the United States has expected from Japan. He has shown that Japan is already in possession of the German rights, privileges, and lease holds. He has also shown that Great Britain and France are under pledge to Japan to stand by her in her claim, and he has challenged the supporters of the proposed amendment to show how China can possibly be benefited unless when we reject Japan's promise we propose to go to war with her and drive her out of Shantung for the benefit of China.

"I think the Senator from North Dakota conclusively demonstrated the folly of the proposed amendment as far as it concerns China and the danger that it involves to the United States."

Senator Hitchcock then explained the inevitable results if the Senate should vote in favor of the Shantung amendment or any other. He said that one of two things would happen—either the President would refuse to go further with the treaty, or he would have to submit the amendment to the nations associated with the United States in the war.

"Does anyone believe," asked the senator, "that the other nations would accept the Shantung amendment?" He pointed out that Great Britain has already ratified the treaty and is under pledge to Japan with reference to Shantung; that France is soon to ratify the treaty and is under the same pledge to Japan.

"Does any one suppose that Japan herself, would submit to such a humiliation before the eyes of the world?" asked Hitchcock. "The answer is simple," he asserted. "We would find ourselves out in the cold isolated from the rest of the world.

"What then, will the United States do? What will those American statesmen propose who stand for this method of killing the treaty? Some of them will say that Congress can pass a joint resolution declaring a state of peace with Germany. Others say the United States can negotiate a separate and independent Treaty of Peace with Germany. Those who talk this way evidently have no conception of the enormous benefits and advantages which the United States derives from this treaty, which we wrung from Germany at the cannon's mouth. Neither have they any conception of the difficulties involved in negotiating a new treaty with Germany to establish the terms of peace and settle the controversies of the war.

"To my mind, it would be suicidal for the United States to throw away the advantages and benefits provided in this treaty. It would be disastrous commercially and financially. It would put us at an enormous disadvantage in our international relations not only with Germany but with those nations which we would thus desert.

"They would remain bound together by ties of mutual interest. They would enjoy the benefits of the treaty and would not be slow to take every advantage of them. They would resent our desertion.

"Up to this point, I have discussed the possible defeat of the treaty by means of proposed amendments to it. That is the real program and hope of the majority of the committee on foreign relations. It is for that purpose that the treaty has been locked up in cold storage for so many weeks. The enemies of the League of Nations in the Senate are not many compared to its friends, but they control the committee. They have felt justified in retaining the treaty in the committee, holding useless hearings and making killing amendments with the full knowledge that amendments would beat the treaty just as effectively as a refusal to ratify.

"A few, a very few, senators have declared that they would vote against the treaty because of the League of Nations, but it has remained for the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. Knox) to declare boldly against our participation in the treaty settlement.

"To say that he has amazed the country is to put it mildly—he has shocked the country.

The Electric Range

Has developed so rapidly that many people incorrectly look on it as something of an experiment.

It has been a practical, efficient member of thousands of households for years.

Do you realize that last year with the limited raw material available—during the war—over 24,000 Electric Ranges were installed in American homes?

If you appreciate a clean, cool kitchen, if you would have your food prepared with the least effort and in the most palatable manner, if you believe in labor saving devices in your home as well as in your business, you will do well to investigate electric cookery and the Electric.

Our representative will call if it is not convenient for you to visit us and see the ranges now.

WATERMELON A LA FILIPINO

Well-Meant Effort of Native Chef Spoiled Surprise American Army Officer Had Planned.

The Filipinos, it seems, have more than one way of serving a watermelon. The melons grown in the far eastern archipelago are small in size and inferior in flavor. Lieutenant Smith, stationed in one of the towns of northern Luzon, hankered for the juicy lusciousness of a melon from his own sunny southland. So his family in Tennessee carefully crated a choice watermelon and shipped it to him by express. It cost him a good many pesos, but no matter. It was a beauty and arrived in perfect condition.

He instructed the cook to prepare a good dinner that very day; the splendid melon was to be served as a crowning glory. The provincial treasurer, the school teacher and the few Americans in the town were invited to partake of a treat that was to be a surprise to them.

The dinner went forward successfully; but there was much curiosity concerning the surprise that the host had promised his guests, and all eyes were turned frequently toward the door through which it was expected to appear. At last it came. The cook entered, bearing aloft an immense platter, and there came from the company a chorus of "Ahs!" The platter was placed on the table under a halo, no, a cloud of—steam. The melon was boiled, thoroughly boiled.

The quick rising of the host to his feet with the carving knife in his hand convinced the cook that he had better make the quickest exist possible, which was through the window, and involved a leap of ten feet to the ground. Reports from the second barrio on the road leading north were that he was still running when he passed through. Lieutenant Smith has not been able to smile about that watermelon yet.—New York Herald.

ONION'S VIRTUES ARE MANY

Eaters of Odoriferous Bulb Rarely Ill, According to Physicians—Aid to Beauty Seekers.

Onion eaters, as medical men have noted, are rarely ill, and that because onions clear, as nothing else does, all the poisons and impurities and germs from the body, according to London Answers. Onions, in fact, are strong disinfectants, and if sliced raw and put about a sickroom would gather to themselves all the infectious germs just as well as an expensive disinfectant would.

It is for that reason that it is extremely dangerous to eat a cut or skinned onion that has been exposed to the air. It has cleared the air, but gathered to its raw surface what it has cleared.

Medically, onions are excellent for insomnia and they aid digestion. Further, an onion diet is one of the cures for rheumatism. This is due to the large proportion of sulphur oil in onions.

It is this oil, too, which produces a beautiful, clear and velvety complexion. Bretons, great onion eaters, are noted for their smooth skins. Onion juice, too, gives immediate relief from pain of wasp and other insects' stings.

Woman's Gift of Instinct.

A celebrated lecturer in giving an informal talk to a number of women on ethics startled his audience, who fairly bristled with rage, when he announced that he did not think women possessed any reasoning powers at all. "But," he continued, "you have what is far better—an instantaneous appreciation."

This wonderful gift of instinct said to belong to womankind, and seldom appraised at its true value by the so-called stronger sex, is certainly heaven sent. No amount of cultivation will develop it, for it is involuntary and is not the result of reasoning, but entirely independent of it.

Where a man will exert all his mental faculties in revolving round and round a subject, looking at it from every point of view, thinking perhaps that he is using calm, cool judgment, he may, nine times out of ten, make a mistake, when a woman's unerring instinct leaps at one bound to the right conclusion.

Bird Is Terror to Bugs.

A cliff swallow will eat a thousand flies, mosquitoes, wheat-midgets or beetles that injure fruit trees in a day and, therefore, are to be encouraged, says the American Forestry association of Washington.

This bird is also known as the cave swallow because it plasters its nest on the outside of a barn or other building up under the eaves. Colonies of several thousand will build their nests together on the side of a cliff. These nests, shaped like a flattened gourd or water-bottle, are made of bits of clay rolled into pellets and lined with straw or feathers. This bird winters in the tropics.

Attachable Lamps.

A new electric lamp will not only stand wherever it is placed on a flat surface, but the base also comprises a clip which may be clamped on any projecting edge or post. Also the lamp may be hung on the wall or placed on a flat surface, using the clip as a base. Since practically all articles of furniture have either an edge, a post or a flat surface, it is possible to use this lamp almost anywhere. As the clamp is felt-lined, there is no danger of scratching or denting polished surfaces.

UNAWARE

By AGNES G. BROGAN.

Barris sat before a confusing litter of papers, and passed his hand in troubled fashion over his forehead.

Allan Barris was a play-writer, as well as manager of various departments connected with that work. His ambition was to present a new and truly great actress in one of his original plays. That desire gave no promise of fulfillment. Matter-of-fact affairs continually claimed his time.

Here, among the litter, were pitiful letters, begging work of almost every kind—those of confident would-be "stars" he found it necessary to ignore. The city seemed to be filled with inexperienced girls certain of their own histrionic ability.

Here was one, from a young woman who had at first written in the enthusiasm of sure success, asking for a certain part in one of his prominent plays. "Though she was unfamiliar with theatrical work," she frankly confessed, "she knew that she could portray his character of 'Normand' faithfully." Her request for a personal interview and trial had been ignored.

The second letter which came from the aspirant was decidedly humble: she would be glad of "a few speaking lines."

The next appeal was for an interview only, and the last, which claimed Allan Barris' amused attention, was for office work of any kind which he could give her. She had suffered "strange misfortune," she wrote, and her need was great."

The appeal touched him, not so much by its pathos as by its cheerful persistence. He wrote the girl, asking her to call upon the following day, and he had almost forgotten his indulgence when she was announced.

In his mind, Barris pictured his frank applicant as a glowing creature garbed in popularly approved fashion. Instead, it was a small gray-clad figure which awaited diffidently his invitation from the doorway. The gray dress was softly clinging, with a quaint kerchief about her shoulders, and it was the girl's shy, glancing purple eyes which first impressed him.

She had spoken advisedly, she was "unusually good looking"—"unusual" was the word.

"Can you do stenography and typewriting?" he asked.

The girl sadly shook her head.

"If you could give me other things at first, I would learn that later," she spoke in a sort of soft eagerness.

"Heretofore, I had no opportunity of learning. My life was—all ease." She caught her breath tremulously and threw out her hands in a hopeless gesture. The wistful eyes were misty with tears.

"Everything changed for me in one moment. That was the strange, hard part of it."

Quickly she brushed the tears from her eyes and leaned toward Barris.

"Can you believe me," she asked, "that I have now between me and starvation just twenty-five cents?"

At his astonished stare, she smiled suddenly, very bravely, Barris thought.

"If you will give me some work to do at once that part of the trouble will soon be disposed of," she told him.

The busy man, whose sympathy and anxiety were usually bound up in his own intricate work, found himself moved now as he had never been moved to pity and admiration. The girl's sincerity could not be doubted; her plucky willingness to work herself out of a discouraging situation won his immediate championship.

"You might begin," he suggested, "by answering that irritating telephone; use your judgment as to whether response upon my part is imperative, or may be postponed. I'm maddeningly busy."

The girl, her hat swiftly removed, was already at the telephone.

Barris noted approvingly the soft arrangement of her hair, in keeping some way with the trim gray frock and serious eyes. For a time he was not disturbed by the telephone, continuing his dictation to an observant young woman typist. Subconsciously, at last, he sensed the stranger's troubled gaze in his direction. Mutely, she seemed to be signaling his help.

Barris abruptly dismissed his stenographer and turned to answer the girl's silent appeal. Her eyes, as he looked down upon her, were darkly tragic.

"I must go," she said, breathlessly. "I must leave you; and, oh, I did so want to stay—my first chance—and the crying need for money—" Her voice broke in its despair.

Again Barris was moved, deeply; the secret, the mystery of her unwillingly gripped him.

"Explain yourself," he said tersely. "Are you, after all, an impostor, or an innocent mistakenly enduring some trouble?"

He was surprised at his own emotions.

"I ask, because I honestly wish to help you," he added gently.

The little gray figure came close. The girl held out imploring hands. Into the purple eyes came a laughing gleam of triumph.

"Thanks," she said. "Your own belief in my acting is the surest proof of its success. I told you that I could do it. For the past hour I have been your 'Normand,' and you have forgotten her in me."

And so it happened that Allen Barris realized his dream, presenting a new and truly great actress in one of his original plays.
